

Running the calendar

181residents.com/admin · sign in with your own email · the full guides live under Instructions

1 · Signing in

- 181residents.com/admin, your own email, then the emailed code. The first code may say “already been used”: the mail scanner opened it first. Request another; the second works.
- Sign out, top right, on any shared machine.

2 · Events and the editor

- Events tab: + New Event, or Edit on a row. Filters: All · Live · Drafts · Unpublished · Archived.
- Draft is never published. Live is on the calendar. Unpublished is pulled with its RSVPs held, ready to go back up. Archived is over, kept for reporting.
- Publish calendar rebuilds the resident site from what is saved; a nightly rebuild at 3 AM keeps the dates current on its own.

3 · Series

- The Repeats picker writes one row per date, so a single week can be moved or skipped without touching the rest.
- In the editor, Which date of this series chooses the week, and the apply to every upcoming date box decides the reach. Untick it to change one date only.
- Move a date and its sign-ups follow; nothing is orphaned.

4 · Capacity and the waitlist

- Capacity left blank means no limit. A full event queues a waitlist, one queue shared with the site and the desk.
- Freed seats are never given out on their own. Confirm seats, on the Dashboard, hands them to the next waiting party, and a note to them opens ready to send.
- A confirmed party never loses seats by editing; a request to grow only goes through if it fits.

5 · Telling residents

- Change a Live event’s date, time, or place while people are signed up, and one BCC email opens in Outlook to all of them, old and new spelled out. Read it, send it.
- Cancel & notify guests, in the editor, pulls the event, holds the RSVPs, and opens the cancellation draft.
- Link on any row copies that date’s page address, made for emails and reminders.
- Calendar subscribers update on their own; anyone who used Add to My Calendar re-taps it after a change. The drafts say so.

6 · Asset kits

- One master kit per event or series, under Assets; every date inherits it. Per piece, the uploaded file is the final version and the Canva link is the living design.
- The editor shows each date’s effective kit. Override this date gives one date its own file; Back to series kit hands it back.
- Every file is named from the stem, so it stays identifiable in Canva, on Nixplay, or at the print shop.

7 · The Archive

- Nothing is filed by hand: a passed or cancelled event drifts in on its own, kit and all, and the downloads and Canva links stay live as templates. Reach it from Archive · N atop Events or Assets; restore by setting the status back to Live.

8 · Dashboard and reporting

- 7, 30, or 90 days; Download CSV opens in Excel. Every QR standee and the weekly email carry their own link, so each scan is attributable.
- RSVP rollups per event with per-unit detail; a unit appearing twice for one event is worth a glance.
- Counts stand beside their percentages; in a small building, read swings as noise until three months agree. Events hosted by others are listed, not counted.

9 · Messages

- The inbox shows who wrote, when, and whether it has been answered. The words themselves are for Leo; residents write to a person, not a department.
