

Resident events, from the desk

181residents.com/admin · sign in as concierge@181sf.com · keep beside the desk phone

1 · Signing in

- Go to 181residents.com/admin. The quiet Staff link at the foot of any page of the site lands in the same place.
- Enter concierge@181sf.com and ask for the emailed code. It arrives in the desk mailbox; type it in and you are through.
- The first code often comes back “already been used.” That is the mail scanner opening the link before you can, not a mistake of yours. Request a new code; the second one works.
- You land on the Dashboard. Your tabs: Dashboard · Residents · Spaces · Messages.
- Stay signed in on the desk computer; there is no need to sign out between shifts, and each fresh sign-in costs another emailed code.

2 · The lost code, any hour

- Residents tab. Find the person; the list is grouped by unit.
- Rotate issues a fresh code. The old one stops working everywhere, on every device, right away.
- Read the new code over the phone, or press Email code: a draft opens in Outlook with the code written out, ready to send.
- One code per person; couples each have their own. Never share a code between people.

3 · Temporary stays

- A renter or a visiting family member gets their own row: unit, name, email, and an Access ends date. The code simply stops working after it.
- Ends on any row sets or clears that date.
- Someone moved out? Disable keeps their history. Leave Delete alone; it is for typos.

4 · RSVPs by phone, or in passing

- Dashboard, RSVPs section, Add an RSVP for someone.
- Pick the person, the event, the party size (1 to 6), names if offered, then Save RSVP.
- If they already had an RSVP for that event, saving updates theirs.
- If the event is full or others are waiting, the RSVP joins the waitlist, the same queue as the site. Say so kindly; nobody skips the line at the desk.

5 · Changes and cancellations

- Every RSVP row has Edit for the party size and Cancel.
- Confirm seats appears on a waitlist row once seats free up. Freed seats are never handed out on their own; pressing it gives them to that party.
- After any change, an email to the resident opens prefilled, ready to send from the desk mailbox. Read it, then send it.
- No email on file? The screen says so. A call, or a word in the lobby, closes the loop.

6 · What the desk view leaves alone

- Events, the calendar itself, publishing, and Assets belong to Resident Experiences. If a resident asks about event content, take a note or send them to Leo.
- Message text is private to Leo. You see who wrote and when, never the words.
- The grey bar at the top reports on itself and stays quiet when all is well. If something looks wrong: reload the page; still wrong, call Leo and read him what the bar says.
